GLOBAL MARKETS

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Currency moves in major markets last week were driven by the European Central Bank's dovish rate cut and strong U.S. data that pushed out expectations for how fast U.S. rates can fall, particularly if Trump wins the presidency.

The dollar index measure against major rivals was at 103.45. It fell 0.3% on Friday as risk appetite picked up broadly across markets after China announced more details of its broad stimulus package, but logged 0.55% gains for the week., the euro was at 0.6%, sterling was flat and the dollar index climbed 0.55%.

The euro stood flat at $1.0866 and sterling was also flat around $1.3045

The euro is down more than 3% in three weeks and has fallen through its 200-day moving average, and is parked near a 2-1/2 month low.

The yen was down 0.1% at 149.32 per dollar, staying on the stronger side of 150 per dollar, having breached that level briefly last week for the first time since early August. Last week, the yen fell 0.3%,

COMMODITIES

Gold prices extended gains and scaled another record high on Monday, steered by elevated Middle East tensions and U.S. election uncertainty, while silver hit a near 12-year peak.

Oil prices steadied in early trading on Monday, following a more than 7% drop last week on worries about demand in China, the world's top oil importer, and an easing of concerns about potential supply disruptions in the Middle East.
